

BAD BEAN DEFECT

By Mister Lemur

After snacking on beans,
I began to suspect that these beans contained some kind of bad bean defect.

My stomach expanded,
my eyes got quite wide.
It felt like a hot spring was gurgling inside

my belly, my gut,
or whatever you'd call it;
it's about to explode
and I'd like to forestall it!

This pain is not normal,
and please understand,
it feels like I've swallowed a whole marching band.

They're playing four trumpets, two horns, a trombone
and the band leader's shouting through his megaphone.

They marched past my kidney to my large intestine,
if you know how to silence them,
yell the suggestion!

My mom called the doc
who said, "Give him some Tums.
That should help silence the horns and the drums."

And the doctor was right, and the band went on break and my stomach returned to just a dull ache.

So surely by now
you must know what this means;
next time I am hungry...
I won't eat three cans of beans!
